

Request for Proposals Global Health Travel or Research Small Grants

Application Deadline: April 15, 2024

The Duke Global Health Institute (DGHI) is pleased to offer small research support or travel grants of up to $5000 each to DGHI faculty and affiliates. Travel grants can be used to pursue global health research opportunities in low, lower- and upper- middle-income countries¹ (a listing of eligible countries can be found at the World Bank website) OR focused on health disparities in the American South. These grants can also be used for research support, including publication fees, hiring professionals (eg editors) for proposal development, analytical support, postdoc/RA assistance – a resource that will enhance an investigator’s competitiveness in finding external research funding.

Applications should emphasize the relationship of the proposal to specific goals (of building partnerships and research collaborations, prospects for longer-term external research funding support, strategic needs for PI’s research portfolio). Budget cannot be used for conference travel, faculty salary, or indirect fees, but can be provided for study team members if appropriate for the proposed activities.

Complete applications will include:

1. Proposal describing proposed travel activities, or the research question to be investigated, rationale for resources, and proposed plan for use (maximum 2 pages; any references do not count toward page limit)
2. Detailed budget and justification for amount requested (1 page)
3. Applicant’s CV or NIH biosketch

Applications are limited to one per investigator. Award funds may be used for services provided by the identified resource only - any other expenses required for the proposed project must be supported by other funding sources, and those funding sources should be identified in the application. Items in the proposed budget should be allowable and justifiable per Duke’s financial requirements.

¹ If you do not plan to visit an LMIC, please contact Kelly Deal before submitting your proposal

Applications should emphasize the prospects for longer-term external research funding support and the relationship of the proposal to DGHI's Priority Locations or Strategic Plan, or research around equity, diversity and inclusion (eg decolonizing global health, equal access to data for collaborators).

Eligibility: Proposals must be submitted by non-adjunct faculty with a DGHI appointment. Proposals from junior faculty and those who have never received a DGHI grant will be given priority in review.
